Still Dating My Spouse As Seen On

About Step and Pamela King

One thing for sure and two things for certain, in 1998, Step and Pamela King did not understand what they were getting themselves into when they had agreed to say I Do before God and their family. Step and Pamela quickly realized that marriage isn't the same as dating and to get serious if they were going to be successful in maintaining their marriage. 18 years later, they have figured out just how to maintain their marriage to meet each others needs and their own needs. They are quick to tell couples, "it is not rocket science but you must be willing to learn your spouse EVERYDAY." Step and Pamela realized what was missing in many marriages is the aspect of couples connecting on a regular basis. They created the website, Still Dating My Spouse, to help couples create and implement healthy relationship practices to improve communication, connection, commitment and consistency in their marriage. Marriage isn't for the faint at heart but it is for those that don't mind a daily adventure with the person they love!
